The present sequence is a peptide encoded by one such probe. The probes are useful for measuring human gene expression in a human breast sample, where the probe hybridises at high stringency to a predicting, diagnosing, grading, staging, monitoring and prognosing diseases of the human breast, particularly those diseases with polygenic aetiology. by protein protein, especially enzymatic, complexes are held together conditions and cohesins, which are found on the catalytic and scaffold subunits and cohesins, which are found on the catalytic and scaffold subunits respectively. An example of such a complex is the cellulose degrading protein complex from Clostridium thermocellum, known as the cellulosome. This complex comprises around 15 proteins including endoglucanases, cellubiohydratases, hemicallulases, e.g. xylanases or lichinases, which cellulosome integrating protein (CipA; see AAWA3108). The catalytic subunits of domains. Cip has been shown to contain 9 copies of a cohesin domain. Compains Cip has been shown to contain 9 copies of a cohesin domain. The invention relates to the isolation of proteins binding to a novel dockerin type domain found in the C-terminal portion of Cip. The new compains is designated a type II dockerin domain (Cip and the catalytic subunits of the cellulosome). The type Cip domain is designated a type II dockerin domain so compared to the type Cip but is unable to bind type I cohesin domains. The cellulosome of the olips gene. The sequence presented here is an example of a protein which binds the novel type II dockerin domains in the N-terminal portion of Cip. The new compains to the first domain (amino acid residues 28-192) is thought to hind the first domain (amino acid residues 28-192) is thought to complexes, especially enzyme complexes, to potentiate their catalytic complexes.

The invention relates to a method of treating osteoarthritis via the CR administration of a composition comprising the camptodactyly-arthropathy-CC coxa vara-pericarditis (CACP) protein, or portions of the CACP protein. CC The composition may further comprise a local anaesthetic. The composition of the invention may be administered via intra-articular or intravenous in the invention may be administered via intra-articular or intravenous being megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). The gene encoding CC CACP protein (MSF) is located on chromosome 1q25-31, and mutations in this gene are responsible for the heritable disorder camptodactyly-CC arthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis, in which patients have synovial CC hyperplasia without evidence of inflammation. CACP protein (MSF) cacts as a synovium lubricant, and can be used to lubricate tissue and CC applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis. The present invention describes coion cumour associated process of the polynucleotides (II) that encode them. (I) have cytostatic activity. (I) and (II) can be used in gene therapy and vaccine production. (I) and (CII) may be used in the prevention, diagnosis and treatment of diseases associated with inappropriate colon tumour associated protein (TCAP) (CII) may be used in the prevention, diagnosis and treatment of diseases associated with inappropriate colon tumour associated protein (TCAP) (CII) may be used to treat disorders associated with decreased expression by activity of TCAPs by expressing inactive proteins or to supplement the CII patients own production of them. Additionally, (II) may be used to produce the TCAP proteins, by inserting the nucleic acids into a host complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic complementary sequences in the production assays to detect and complementary sequences in the production assays to detect and complementary sequences in the production of antibodies against TCAPs and in assays to identify modulators of TCAP expression and activity. The anti-(I) antibodies may also be used to down regulate complementary and activity. The anti-(I) antibodies may also be used as diagnostic agents for detecting the presence of TCAPs in samples.

This sequence was purified using a carrier which can couple wheat germ agglutinin and heparin to separate MPO. Fragments of this sequence (see AAR80039 and AAR80040) were used to produce the amplification primers shown in AAT04544 and AAT04545. The fragments amplified by these primers can then be used as probes to screen human cDNA libraries for MPO cDNA. The MPO cDNA can then be inserted into a plasmid which is used to transform cells to produce MPO. The MPO sequence is capable of promoting colony formation of megakaryocytes, enlarging the size of megakaryocytes and stimulating the proliferation of multipotential stem cells. The factor may be used for treating thrombocytopenia and hematocytopenia.

The invention relates to a human tribonectin which is a product of calternative splicing of the human MSF (megakaryocyte stimulating factor) compensation of the human MSF (megakaryocyte stimulating factor) compensation of a motify and has a polypeptide sequence comprising 1-76 compensation of a motify having at least 50% identity to the sequence KEPAPTT human MSF-derived tribonectin; a blocompatible composition comprising a company of the invention also relates to a nucleic acid encoding a computation of the invention also relates to a nucleic acid encoding a computation; and a method measuring the amount of MSF or its fragment in a biological sample of a company of the amount of MSF or its fragment in a biological sample of a control company of the presence of or predisposition to developing costeoarthritis. The tribonectin and DNA encoding it are useful in the content of osteoarthritis, where they may be used for lubricating content of the predisposition to developing content content in the content of content of the predisposition to developing content of content of osteoarthritis, where they may be used for lubricating content of the predisposition to developing content of the predisposition to developing content of content of osteoarthritis, where they may be used for lubricating content of the predisposition to developing control the predisposition to developing control content of the predisposition to developing control content of the predisposition to developing control content of the predi

The invention relates to a human tribonectin which is a product of alternative splicing of the human MSF (megakaryocyte stimulating factor) gene. The tribonectin has at least one O-linked oligosaccharide lubricating molety and has a polypeptide sequence comprising 1-76 repeats of a motif having at least 50% identity to the sequence KEPAPTT (AAB29774). The invention also relates to a nucleic acid encoding a

                                                                                                                                                                                            The invention relates to a method of treating osteoarthritis via the administration of a composition comprising the camptodactyly-arthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis (CACC) protein, or portions of the CACP protein. The composition may further comprise a local anaesthetic. The composition of the invention may be administered via intra-articular or intravenous injection. The human CACP protein is identified in the invention as being megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). The gene encoding CACP protein (MSF) is located on chromosome 1q25-31, and mutations in this gene are responsible for the heritable disorder camptodactyly-arthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis, in which pattents have synovial hyperplasia without evidence of inflammation. CACP protein (MSF) acts as a synovium lubricant, and can be used to lubricate tissue and acts as a synovium lubricant, and can be used to lubricate tissue and applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis. The composition may be applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthrities (e.g., joint pain, applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthrities and the symptoms of osteoarthrities and the symptoms of osteoarthrit

CC stimulating factor (MSF) precursor. The sequence covered by exons II, CC sequence is modified by the addition of an N-terminal sequence encoding CC a secretory leader, an initiating methionine proceeding sequence sequences derived from human megakarycety colony stimulating factor (MSF). This CC asequences derived from human megakarycety colony stimulating factor (MSF). Exon I contains the initiating methionine, and encodes a CC encoding the original meg-CSF includes exons II-TV and is thought to classical mammalian protein secretion signal sequence. The sequence cc encoding the original meg-CSF includes exons II-TV and is thought to classical family of mRNA's each encoding a different ways to CC yield a family of mRNA's each encoding a different ways to CC yield a family of mRNA's each encoding a different ways to CC wand VI are thought to be related to the activity of the factor and CC are also implicated in the stability, folding and processing of the CC synergy of MSF with other cytokines. Exons V - XII are believed to be claimed in the processing or folding of the appropriate structure of CC implicated in the processing or folding of the appropriate structure of CC sequences which direct proteolytic cleavage, adhesion, organisation of CC the cellular matrix or extracellular matrix processing. Both naturally occuring and non-naturally occuring MSF's may be characterised by with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different tips of the members of the MSF family.

Its amino acid sequence shows a high proline content, but there is no homology to any known proline-rich antigens of mycobacteria. Novel M. tuberculosis proteins (see AAM93851-57) are claimed. These can be produced as recombinant proteins, especially in bacterial, yeast, fungal or higher eukaryote host cells, and used for diagnosing tuberculosis and other mycobacterial infections in humans or animals. The claimed proteins can also be used for epidemiological studies, for monitoring vaccination, and for the development of vaccines and

The present sequence is obtained from a clustral x alignment with CC protein 608. Protein 608 was identified using the method of the invention after subjecting rat osteoblasts to mechanical stress. Expression of the CC 608 gene was found to be upregulated by about 3-fold in cells subjected to mechanical strain. The specification describes a method for the CC identification of genes responsive to a specific mechanical stress. The method comprises applying the mechanical stress to an organism (tissue or cells comprising bone cells), isolating the specific cellular fractions and extracting mRNA from them, and differentially analysing the genes whose expression is responsive to a specific stress. The identified genes are employed in determining risk associated with a physiological or medicament for gene therapy. These medicaments, or genes identified by the method of the invention, are used for treating, preventing or

Its amino acid sequence shows a high proline content, but there is no homology to any known proline-rich antigens of mycobacteria. Novel M. tuberculosis proteins (see AAW31851-57) are claimed. These can be produced as recombinant proteins, especially in bacterial, yeast, fungal or higher eukaryote host cells, and used for diagnosing tuberculosis and other mycobacterial infections in humans or animals. The claimed proteins can also be used for epidemiological studies, for monitoring vaccination, and for the development of vaccines and

The present sequence is a peptide encoded by one such probe. The probes are useful for measuring human gene expression in a human breast sample, where the probe hybridises at high stringency to a predicting, diagnosing, grading, staging, monitoring and prognosing diseases of the human breast, particularly those diseases with polygenic aetiology. The diseases include: breast cancer, disorders of development, inflammatory diseases of the breast, fibrocystic changes, proliferative breast disease and non-carcinoma tumours.

Aw Multimeric protein, especially enzymatic, complexes are held together CC by protein-protein interactions between domains designated dockerins CC and cohesins, which are found on the catalytic and scaffold subunits CC and cohesins, which are found on the catalytic and scaffold subunits CC protein complex from Clostridium thermocellum, known as the celluloscome. CC chis complex comprises around 15 proteins including endoglucanases, cc cellobiohydratases, hemicellulases, e.g. xylanases or lichinases, which cintegrating protein (CipA; see AAW43108). The catalytic subunits CC integrating protein (CipA; see AAW43108). The catalytic subunits CC integrating protein (CipA; see AAW43108). The catalytic subunits CC domains. Cip has been shown to contain 9 copies of a cohesin domain. CC dockerin type domain found in the C-terminal portion of Cip. The new CC domain is designated a type II dockerin domain (as compared to the type CC I dockerin domain found on the catalytic subunits of the cellulosome). The type CC I dockerin domain has some sequence similarity to the type I dockerins but is unable to bind type I cohesin domains. CC the novel type II dockerin and is the product of the OlpB gene. CC the protein contains 4 type II cohesin domains in the N-terminal portion of which the first domain (amino acid residues 28-92) is thought to bind CipA. The novel type II dockerin and cohesin domains can be used to bind CipA. The novel type II dockerin and cohesin domains can be used in complexes. especially enzyme complexes, to potentiate their catalytic catalytic contains 4 type II dockerin and cohesin domains can be used to bind CipA.
